Don't Make These Common Tax-Time Mistakes

Texas Society of CPAs Offers Last-Minute Tax Tips for the Approaching April 18 Deadline

DALLAS (April 7, 2016) — You gather all your paperwork, finalize your tax return and you're ready to go. But just as you're about to send it off to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), you wonder, "Should I check my math again? Did I take all the deductions I should have?" As taxpayers scramble to complete their tax paperwork and get it in by the April 18 deadline, the Texas Society of CPAs offers these do's and don'ts that will help minimize your tax filing headaches.

Do Check Your Facts

The IRS reports that some of the common errors it sees on tax returns include wrong or omitted Social Security numbers, math mistakes, and misspelled names and forms that aren't signed or dated. Taxes can be stressful, but if you take a deep breath and review your work before you send it, it could save you time (and possible penalties) later.

Don't Overlook Additional Income

Most taxpayers are used to getting a Form W-2 from their employers in January reporting their income and withholding for the previous year. However, you may also receive other statements if you performed any freelance or consulting work during the year (Form 1099-MISC) or if you earned money from savings or investment accounts (Forms 1099-DIV or 1099-INT). If you fail to include this income on your return, you could end up paying penalties and interest.

Do Get Organized

Whether you're filing an individual return or one for a small business, it's always easier when your documents are in order and easy to access when you need them at tax time. Having your paperwork on hand enables you to identify possible deductions for which you qualify and document your eligibility to take them. It will also make it easier to spot income or other items that should be reported on your return so that you can avoid penalties. An added bonus: Good documentation of your investments and other financial transactions will help you better manage your personal or business finances. If you're ever audited, you'll be ready with the paperwork you need.

Do Deduct Donations

You know that cash you give to charities is typically deductible, but don't overlook other donations that can also add up. That may include the value of clothing, furniture, food or even cars that you give to an organization to help support a good cause. To claim the deduction, be sure that the donation is made to a qualified organization and be ready to document the current fair market value of any non-cash donations.

Don't Fail to File

You must file a federal income tax return if your income is above a certain level, which varies depending on your filing status, age and the type of income you receive. Even if you believe you don't owe taxes, that you aren't eligible for a refund or you don't have the money to pay your taxes, it's important to send your return to the IRS in time for the deadline. If you don't, you could face a penalty for failing to file, failure to pay, or both. Here's another incentive: In a recent year, the IRS announced that it was holding $1 billion in tax refunds that were due to people who hadn't filed their returns. The median check awaiting these taxpayers was $698 and they came from every state, as well as the District of Columbia. Whether it's a matter of avoiding a penalty or getting a nice refund, there are many good reasons to be sure your return is in on time.
